OTHER CONSIDERATIONS

Dramatic changes are occurring in the dental technology field - "The offshore problem is acute. Laboratory work is being done in numerous countries at a fraction of the cost in the United States. The result is that the American dental laboratory technician must....cut cost to the bone...." Dr. Gordon Christensen, DDS, MSD, PhD

Journal of Dental Technology August/September 2012 - "...more than 20 countries exported dental products into the U.S. $35.6 Million - Chinese laboratories exported; $12.3 Million - German laboratories exported; $11.2 million Spanish laboratories exported and the list goes on. Twenty-one countries exported over $1 Million worth of dental laboratory products.

"Dental treatments that have traditionally required lab procedures are evolving..... crowns may not go to the lab at all but will be milled in the office using a digital impression device." Dr. Larry Emmott; DCdentalcompare; August, 2013

Prediction: Enormous cost of computer driven milling of prothesis will cause the large dental chains and laboratories (often owned by dentists) to get larger and the small to medium-size labs will wither and die.

Then there is the age-old problem with communication: "87% of dentists reported returning dental work to a dental lab for correction." Kelly Sodurlun, ADA News

"As a CDT I was proud of my talents yet frustrated at times when I felt limited from doing my best for an 'unseen' patient. Becoming a licensed denturist changed my life." S. Whisenant, DPD (Georgia)

"I enjoyed my career as a dental technician, but always believed I could do a better job if I could actually see the patient instead of having to fabricate a denture for someone sight unseen. When a friend told me about denturists, I was excited and said that's for me. I've never regretted my choice." F. Giovanini, LD (Idaho)

"As a former CDT, accepting the challenge, attending Denturist College and receiving my license to practice independently as a denturist is right up there with the best things that ever happened to me in my life." B. Carl, BS, DPD (Washington State)
